VO2 MAX

Training at or near VO2max (the exercise intensity at which you reach your maximal rate of oxygen consumption) has long been known as an effective way to increase aerobic capacity. What is the best workout to increase this? Matt Fitzgerald from Training Peaks shares three workouts.

NEW GEOSEARCH SYSTEM

Thank you Jake Kassen (#3598) for developing a new search feature. This new system allows the following:

- It lets riders find nearby RUSA events (Brevets, Audax, etc) and the regions running without regard to state lines.
- It allows riders to "subscribe" to a region's calendar of events and sync in their calendar application.
- For permanents, it overlays all nearby routes on a map and shows details such as the number of riders who have finished, elevation gain, gravel, etc.
- It will show permanent routes nearest to a search address irrespective of the official start city.

(BMB) was the first 1200k in North America? Were you aware that it was existence for 19 years? Lots of interesting facts and history of this event are now available.

We are planning on more histories of US Grand Randonnées. This is just the first of many and we hope you enjoy it.
